
M'CALL TAKES PARTY THROUGH IN HEAVY STATE BALLOTING

More complete election returns coming in today show that the plurality of Samuel W. McCall, who was yesterday elected Governor in one of the biggest elections ever held in Massachusetts, was 18,777.

Woman's suffrage was defeated by 51,718.

Charles Coolidge of Northampton, president of the State senate, who was elected Lieutenant-Governor over Edward P. Barry by a plurality of 51,715. He has taken and polled the highest vote of any candidate with 25,939 votes.

SWEET FISH B. C. C.

The U. S. P. accomplished a full sweep, Laney defeating Governor for Secretary of State, Burdett defeating Bowles for Treasurer, Clark winning over Morse for Auditor, and still being re-elected by a handsome plurality over Donahue.

Governor Walsh went down to an honorable defeat, polling one of the most remarkable votes ever received by a losing candidate in the history of the State. The Governor polled 51,814. McCall's vote was 25,411.

The vote in the State was:

The Governor probably would have been elected.

McCall's increase was conspicuous in Democratic sections, notably wards 1 and 18, the latter provided by Senator James P. Timilty.

Annihilation of leading Republicans by the liquor interest is said to have contributed to the Governor's defeat. Reports were current during the day that Republicans not only failed to elect McCall but that they were "not in line" with the U. S. P. would put a prohibition man in its platform next year.

In conclusion, with these remarks the statement issued by William W. McCall for Governor on the day of his election, it is significant.

The organized liquor vote of Massachusetts killed Governor Walsh to elect Samuel W. McCall. In a desperate effort to prevent the Republican party from adopting prohibition, it was their only hope. The liquor vote was a factor in the election of McCall by a margin of 18,777. The liquor vote was a factor in the election of McCall by a margin of 18,777.

McCall in Boston gained 1,000 votes over last year.

Had Boston increased the Walsh and McCall vote in the same proportion as elsewhere throughout the State, McCall would have won.

SPLENDID PROTEST.

A splendid protest vote against liquor domination was registered. The prohibition party became a legal political party and with almost confidence in the ultimate victory of the issue, the organization of city and town committees.

preliminary to the campaign of 1914 will begin this morning.

It was not a political triumph to accept party victory as equivalent to the triumph of principles, and I cannot therefore consistently extend congratulations in the conventional way to my opponent who is elected. That would be the greatest injustice and hypocrisy on my part, as I have made no campaign under the conviction that the triumph of either dominant party would be a victory for the people.

Governor-elect McCall was kept from all parts of the country by his reading of congratulatory telegrams from all parts of the country.

In an interview given to the AMERICAN today Governor-elect Samuel W. McCall said that he fully anticipated his victory, that he believed that it would have a big bearing on the national election in 1916 and that the Republican party had "come back" in Massachusetts.

He heartily complimented Governor Walsh as a man and as a campaigner, but said the Governor's attitude on the milk bill had hurt him everywhere except in a few towns in the western part of the State.

He believed that the milk bill hurt him a great deal. A few towns in the western part of the State gave him an increase over last year, but on the whole the Republican party showed the real increase in the vote. The whole country has been watching the outcome of this fight, and it will have a big bearing on the national election next fall.

PRaise FOR WALSH.

Governor Walsh is a fine man and he was the strongest possible candidate for the Democratic party to put in the field. He is an excellent campaigner and speaker and has a wonderful personality. I have seen him on the best stage I have ever seen in political history. I believe that the people of the Commonwealth, however, wanted a change and the Republican party is back into its own.

(Here he turned to another batch of unsigned telegrams and Mrs. McCall, from the stairway, called to him about a telephone message.)

I am pretty popular today from the number of calls I have received.

I want to thank the voters of Massachusetts for electing me the next Governor of the Commonwealth. It is a great honor and I will not let it down. I will do the best interest of the people of the State. I believe that the old-time Republican property will again rule in the State."

ANALYSTS' RESULTS.

(At this point another messenger boy arrived with several telegrams. Mr. McCall signed for them, and started to read them.)

"All have a message from Nick Longworth, congratulating me. I have them from San Francisco and most of my old associates in Congress have sent me congratulations.

I think that the people have walked up to the fact that the Republican party is the best one, and that with them property will follow. In the mill town you will notice that I have gained hundreds of votes over last year, and that Governor Walsh lost in many of them over his last year's figure.

Lawrence and Lowell, however, where big war orders have recently been placed, do not hold to this, and for that reason the Governor gained there. I carried New Bedford handsomely, and the Governor only carried Fall River over me by a narrow vote, where last year he had several hundred.

I believe that the milk bill hurt him a great deal. A few towns in the western part of the State gave him an increase over last year, but on the whole the Republican party showed the real increase in the vote. The whole country has been watching the outcome of this fight, and it will have a big bearing on the national election next fall.

WALSH A GOOD LOSER; CHEERS FOR M'CALL

Governor Walsh first publicly conceded defeat at an address at 9:30 last evening before the members of the Bay State Automobile Club in the main dining hall of the Hotel Lenox. Governor Walsh led in three cheers for the next Governor, Sam McCall.

When the Governor entered the hall the members arose and cheered him for several minutes. Governor Walsh stood on the platform, raised his hands for quiet and said:

"Now, fellows, let's give three cheers for the next Governor, Sam McCall."

He waved his arm for the cheering. One of "Good boys, Walsh," and "You're a good loser," were heard, and then they started cheering "For our next Governor."

Governor's Speech.

Next year, when I am a private citizen, I can mingle more with you, and be more genial, perhaps, than at present as a dignified Governor. (Laughter.) I have been concerned in all organizations of this character.

There is some advantage in being a private citizen. A candidate for office after he has his burdens, and his motives are sometimes construed as being selfish.

It is a pleasure for me to receive this greeting from you and to say to you in all confidence that next year the Commonwealth will have a man of character and ability and honor at its head. ("Good boys, Walsh," interrupted a voice.) I have no regrets. I have made the best fight I could, and I know in my heart I have tried to be a faithful and conscientious Governor. (Cheering.)

There is a tinge of satisfaction in laying down these burdens and going back to be a regular fellow again. (Laughter.)

Will Help Solve Problems.

But there is a pleasure to have been Governor two years and to have increased your vote by 50,000 over the first time you were a candidate. It is evidence of an approval.

The reason of my defeat is the preference of a few thousands of Republicans rather than a good Democrat. (Laughter.)

I am not going back to the woods where I come from. I am going to the Commonwealth to help it to solve its problems.

At the conclusion of his speech the Governor was given a tremendous ovation, and the crowd sang a "Golly good fellow." The Governor was also elected an honorary member of the Bay State Automobile Club. He is the only honorary member of the club.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Executive Department.
Boston, November 3, 1915.

To the Boston American:

Your paper again has earned the thanks of the independent forces of Massachusetts for its earnest advocacy of progressive principles in this campaign. Alert, vigorous, and direct in your professions of progressivism, I am sure that the people of Massachusetts feel certain that their rights will be safeguarded by the power and influence of the Boston American. May I thank your paper for its steadfast support of my administration as Governor and commend it for its freedom from every interest hostile to true representative government.

Sincerely,

HARD BLOW TO PERMISSIVE M'CALL HAS HAD SUFFRAGE IN CONGRESS WON BY ANTS AND G. O. P.

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Political experts today, after analyzing the returns from yesterday's election in the States where the question of woman suffrage was at issue, declared that the plan of the suffrage leaders to secure national amendment is doomed to failure.

The various organizations of women will move their headquarters to this city shortly and will hold a series of conventions early next month to endeavor to line up Congress for their proposed amendment. However, officials here declare that they are certain to lose.

Rejection of suffrage by four important States such as New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, with their powerful congressional representation here, will be followed, political experts say, by the delegations from those States voting almost solidly against any resolution to submit a constitutional amendment to the States.

It is pointed out that since 1912 eleven States have rejected suffrage, and that the South is almost solidly against it.

LITTLE HOPE IN CONGRESS.

With this as an argument, and President Wilson taking the position that the question is a State and not a national issue, it is not believed here that Congress will permit the constitutional amendment to be submitted to the people.

New Jersey, which rejected suffrage two weeks ago, has twelve Representatives; New York has forty-three; Massachusetts has thirteen; and Pennsylvania has thirteen. The other States, which definitely have rejected suffrage since 1913, with their congressional representation are: Minnesota, twelve; Missouri, sixteen; Nebraska, six; North Dakota, three; Wisconsin, six; South Dakota, three; and Wisconsin, eleven.

Three-fourths of the States would have to reject a constitutional amendment on suffrage, and the majority of the Senate and House will be opposed to it.

The result yesterday in the three States which voted on the question and which rejected it by very large majorities, should give the plan of the suffrage leaders to secure favorable congressional action a severe blow.

DEFEAT NOT CONCEDED.

Nevertheless, suffrage leaders declare that they will carry the fight directly into Congress as soon as it convenes and that every individual member of the Senate and House will be approached and pleaded with.

The suffrage leaders insist that their showing yesterday entitles them to "another chance" and that they will fight hard to secure it.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 3.—Leaders of the suffragists, undismayed by their defeat in Pennsylvania by a majority estimated at 55,000, declare today that the fight will go on.

A great mass meeting will be held in Philadelphia tonight when the suffragists will discuss the plan of the suffrage leaders to secure national amendment.

Suffrage was the big issue in the Pennsylvania election, although the returns show that the Republicans have tightened their grip on the State.

In Philadelphia the Republican opposition to woman suffrage was led by Thomas Smith, being elected Mayor over George D. Folger by a majority estimated at nearly 100,000.

The Republican victory in Philadelphia increases the strength of the Pennsylvania fight for the right against the Franklin party and Democrats.

"Analysis of the returns on suffrage shows that the greatest opposition to woman suffrage is in the great industrial city of Philadelphia," where it was estimated that the suffrage amendment would receive the solid support of only 10,000.

In Cambria, Dauphin, and in Lehigh counties, where there are big steel companies employing thousands of workmen, big meetings were held against suffrage. This was considered a thing, this anti-suffrage sentiment is strong in the industrial communities and many Socialist organizations endorsed suffrage and pledged their members to vote for it.

Later returns indicated that the suffrage amendment got majority only in six counties. In many communities the vote was close to one against the women.

In addition to the proposed amendment granting suffrage to women four other amendments to the constitution were voted on and all carried.

The suffragists are jubilant over the outcome. The majority against suffrage in the State is estimated at 100,000.

Charges of fraud have been made and it was declared that warrants would be sworn out for three million dollars in damages from the voters of the Sherman law.

The vote for superior courts resulted in the election of Judges Orin E. Remond and J. Edgar Williams of Philadelphia.

BRIGHTER CHILDREN

Children are probably brighter today than a generation ago—but are they stronger? That's a grave question. So many pinched faces, dazed eyes and languid feelings make one feel that they will never grow into robust, healthy men and women.

If your children catch cold easily, are tired when rising, lack healthy color, or find studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion for one month to enrich their blood and restore the body-factors to healthy action.

Scott's Emulsion is used in private schools. It is not a "patent medicine," simply a highly concentrated oil-food, without alcohol or harmful drugs. It cannot harm it, improves the system. Your druggist has it—pure substitutes.

Samuel Walker McCall was born in East Providence, Pa., in 1851, received his early education at the New Hampton Academy, New Hampshire. He graduated from Dartmouth in 1874 and was admitted to the bar in Boston in 1876.

For some years he was editor-in-chief of the Advertiser and was elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1889, 1890 and 1891. From 1891 to 1902 he was representative of the Eleventh Congressional District of his State in the National House of Representatives. He was a delegate to the Republican National convention in 1896 and 1904, and seconded the nomination of General Breckinridge for the presidency in the former year.

On January 4, 1912, against a third term for the President of the United States became celebrated in the House of Representatives.

In February, 1909, Congressman McCall was elected to the New Hampshire State Senate, but declined it. He was elected to the New Hampshire State Senate in 1910, but declined it.

NEW HAVEN JOY LINE DEAL TO BE DISCLOSED

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 3.—When Judge Hunt resumed this morning the trial in the Federal District Court of William Rockefeller, Lewis C. Layard, and the nine other former directors of the New Haven, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company on the charge of having conspired to violate the Sherman law, the government recalled Charles C. Goodrich, general manager of the Hartford & New York Transportation Company.

He has told the story of the acquisition of the transportation company, of which he was at one time practical owner, to the point where he had received an offer for it from the New Haven Company, and he will complete the record of how he finally sold it, taking in payment stock in the New Haven.

He is likely to be the first of the witnesses of the Government to run the gamut of seven cross-examinations. Mr. McKee's cross-examination has been reserved until he completes his entire examination.

After the Hartford & New York Transportation Company has been disposed of, the government intends to take up the Joy Line episode. This line the government will try to show was running steamboats up to the end of 1915 from New York to Providence and Boston, and at the latter point was connecting with trolley lines, which enabled it to establish through routes to many manufacturing towns in New England from New York, and thus to compete directly with the New Haven.

In December, 1915, the government will seek to prove from the minutes of the New Haven directors and other documents, the railroad bought all the stock of the Joy Line through the New England Navigation Company, one of its subsidiaries. It kept the purchase secret, and for two years it was alleged it kept the Joy Line ostensibly as an independent to drive business to the Hartford & New York Transportation Company, which was operating steamboats between this city and Providence, Fall River, Narragansett Pier and Newport.

The government will seek to show that the Joy Line ran an "independent" line between New York and Bridgeport to compete with a rival, with the result that it soon captured all the business and the competing steamboats as well. When the work was done, the government will add, the New Haven company had the line to sell its Boston line to the Metropolitan Steamship Company, which was the Providence and Bridgeport line to the United States Transportation Company.

What EXCLUSIVE Means In Our American-Made Rugs

Jordan Marsh Company is recognized throughout the United States as being the largest distributors of domestic rugs in New England. Manufacturers are willing, in view of our large purchasing power and the immense orders we place, to confine certain of their best patterns to us exclusively—allowing no other New England store to offer them for sale. Such well-known rugs as the Hartford Saxony, the Bigelow "Balkan," the "Karnak" of W. & J. Sloane, the French weave "Empress," the "Sundour" rug for baths and chambers, all contribute beautiful numbers to our exclusive use. If you are looking for a rug that's different—the easiest way is to come here.

Our Specifications to Manufacturers Are Very Strict

Every rug manufacturer is desirous of obtaining a share of our business for he knows that the fact of his selling Jordan Marsh Company is a potent factor in his sales campaign. It is particularly a factor because it is well recognized among the trade that we are very strict in our demands and the slightest blemish in the quality of a rug or any error in the coloring is enough for us to refuse to handle it. To be able to sell Jordan Marsh Company a rug is to put the stamp of quality upon it. There are no "seconds" or "as is" rugs in our regular stock.

The Time to Buy Rugs Is Now

The present European war has directly or indirectly caused havoc in the rug market. Wool, rags and dyes are extremely scarce and the prices are consequently much higher than the usual standard. The cost of rugs has advanced over 15% since April last. We contracted for our supply before the advance, however, and our customers will receive the benefit while our present stock lasts.

CHANDLER AUTO DRIVEN BY A GIRL FRIEND IN CRASH

Byron Chandler, the "Million Dollar Kid" of Manchester, N. H., and Miss Luella Gear, daughter of James Gear, a New York hardware man. They have been reported engaged, but the girl's mother has denied this.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Hon. Lionel Walton, member of the House of Commons from the Tiverton division of Devon, is dead in Scotland from tubercular meningitis, as the result of exposure in the trenches in France. He is the seventh member of the British Parliament to die as a result of the war.

Asks Divorce from Brown Rugby Guard

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 3.—J. Parker Coombs, star guard of the 1891-1892 Brown University football team, has been sued for divorce. His wife, who is Mrs. Mary Thompson, of one of Portland's most prominent families, is now living in Portland. She asks the custody of two children and alimony, and alleges cruel and abusive treatment.

Friends of Byron Chandler in Boston and Manchester, N. H., were interested today in a dispatch from New York which announced that the young son of the "Millionaire Kid" had collided with a closed carriage on the West Drive of Central Park in New York.

Chandler was not in the automobile at the time. His occupants were Miss Luella Gear, seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gear of Danbury, eighth street, and Chandler's chauffeur, Frederick Healy. Miss Gear's father is a prosperous hardware merchant. Her mother declared that there was no foundation for the report that Luella was engaged to Byron Chandler. Mrs. Gear said the rumor undoubtedly developed from the fact that Mr. Chandler and her daughter had been "in each other's company on several occasions."

CHAS. HUNTER. Miss Gear was scheduled to appear in court today charged with operating an automobile without a license. The accident happened near Daniel Webster's statue. In the carriage struck by the automobile was Miss Edith Hendricks, sister of Harmon W. Hendricks, a manufacturer, of East Forty-fourth street. A moment after the collision she was about to step out, when the horses bolted and dashed northward on the drive, throwing the coachman, Hugh Kierman, to the roadway. The horses continued their run for nearly a quarter of a mile, Miss Hendricks being thrown about in her seat, while the carriage veered from side to side, grating the wheels of many automobiles.

POLICE IN CHASE. Opposite Eighty-fifth street the team ran against a motorcycle operated by Leon Cammer of West One Hundred and Twenty-second street. He was thrown to the roadway, but was not seriously injured. By this time several policemen were chasing the runaway, and opposite Eighty-sixth street Patrolman Harriott of the Arsenal station rushed into the middle of the road, grabbed the reins, which were trailing in the dust, and brought the team to a stop. Miss Hendricks was frightened, but unhurt. Harriott summoned an automobile and sent her home. Other policemen carried Kierman, the coachman, to the roadside, where he was attended by Dr. Rimmer of the Flower Hospital, then taken to the hospital, treated for slight injuries and sent home.

A quarter of a mile back Miss Gear was trying to explain to the police how it all happened. She would not hold her for reckless driving because her axe had not been going at a consecutive rate of speed, but they served her with a summons to appear with operating an automobile without a license.

Election Auto Kills Boy in Pittsfield

PITTSFIELD, Nov. 3.—In trying to drive his automobile past a crowd gathered near a polling place on North street, James H. Kelly, an electric worker, ran over and killed William Hendricks, seven. Kelly had his car so close to the crowd that another boy was killed and a charge of manslaughter.

Charter Plan Is Defeated in Lynn

"Plan B," a suggested new city charter for Lynn, was defeated last night by the voters, who cast 2,252 votes against it and 2,715 for it. Six of the seven wards opposed change in the system of government.

CONSIDER SITES GENERAL STRIKE FOR SUNDAY'S TABERNACLE

The site for "Billy" Sunday's tabernacle in Boston will not be chosen for some time, according to reports of the committee in charge.

John H. Spruce, head carpenter for the noted evangelist, will look over several sites in the neighborhood of Huntington avenue, near the Massachusetts Museum of Fine Arts.

One of these sites has been in mind for some time, but nothing definite has been done. Mr. Spruce is now in this city and will be in consultation with Allen Hiner, president of the Sunday campaign.

F. F. Davidson, head of the Religious Activities Committee, will call his committee together next Thursday in the Y. M. C. A. Building, and many names will be considered to be placed on sub-committees.

Great care is being taken to get the right men on the committee of arrangements. Not only will the meetings be held in Boston, but plans are under way to hold meetings in Lowell and other large cities.

The Rev. Dr. D. A. MacPhee, who has charge of the Sunday headquarters in Tremont Temple, is very hopeful about the outcome of the Sunday campaign.

"While we had little during the summer, the matter of preparation is now well under way," he said.

"There will be no definite arrangements until the committee of the tabernacle at present. With a few more we will be looking for a choice will be made for some time."

Wants Band That Quit Discharged

Because the 8th Infantry Band of Lynn, left the line without permission during a parade at Lowell, July 3, Lieutenant J. Wardworth Nason, acting adjutant, has asked that about twenty members be discharged from service. It is claimed that the players quit just before the regiment was reviewed in review before the Governor. The band men may ask for a hearing.

Strikers Reject Meriden Offer

MERIDEN, Ct., Nov. 3.—Striking employees of the International River Company rejected the offer made through George H. Wilson, president of the company. The offer was a nine-hour day with ten hours' pay, beginning on January 1.

Taft Rejoices in Victory in the Bay State

By International News Service. NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 3.—Former President William Howard Taft, commenting upon the results of yesterday's elections, said:

"I am very much pleased with the election of Mr. McCall. It is very significant. Mr. McCall had some local objections to overcome that only those who were intimately acquainted of the conditions could understand. The fact that the Progressive party is disappearing in Massachusetts and that the Republican ticket is elected, is very significant to me of the probability of Republican victory in 1916."

"Of course I haven't heard the returns from Maryland and Kentucky, though there, too, the Republican party seems to have gained its old-time strength by the union of the previous divisions. I am very much disappointed at the defeat of the new Constitution in New York. This was the best chance it has ever had of being offered to voters in a very long time in any State."

"I have no comment to make on the defeat of women suffrage, except to say that it was not a surprise."

Walsh Sends McCall Letter of Congratulation

Governor Walsh early today sent a letter to Samuel W. McCall congratulating him on his election and wishing him a successful administration.

His letter is as follows: "My dear Mr. McCall: I have pleasure in the return which I have at hand that you have been elected Governor of Massachusetts."

I extend to you my congratulations and wish you a successful administration."

FUNSTON MOVES MORE MEN TO DOUGLAS

By International News Service. DOUGLAS, Ariz., Nov. 3.—Though defeated so far in his efforts to capture Agua Prieta from the Carranza forces, General Francisco Villa has declared his intention of taking the Mexican border town no matter what sacrifices are required for final success.

As a result General Frederick Funston, commander of the American troops on the border, is strengthening his forces and holding them in readiness for instant action to preserve the lives of American citizens.

Villa is 100 miles south of Agua Prieta today preparing for his next attack. His army has been joined by 8,000 fresh troops from Chihuahua and it is estimated that when he reopens his assault he will have about 23,000 men under his command.

Four troops of the Tenth United States Cavalry have arrived from Naco and four troops of the Thirtieth Cavalry are expected soon.

The concentration of cavalry forces at Douglas indicates that Funston intends to make a sudden dash across the border if either Carranza or Villistas display his demand that neither belligerent endanger Americans.

But if Lewis had done the right thing and made weight, and then administered the sweet spanking he did last night, he would have been in the top seat and the bottom would have dropped out of his "house" November 16 with Charley White.

THAT'S the meaty meat Bayler v. White. As it is to be an unrighteous lightweight battle, the boys will be in the ring for 10 rounds, if they are not knocked out. Lewis is bound to draw well, as he has in the two western late battles here. He put up an hot scrap as was even fought in Boston.

GILMAN AND DADMAN BACK IN HARVARD LINE

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

Although there is nothing definite on this matter, it looks like there is a possibility that Gilman and Dadman will be back in the Harvard line.

There can be no question in anyone's mind who has watched the work of the Harvard football squad, but that there is considerable unrest and uneasiness about the team.

The days are fast slipping away and now the season is over. The Harvard boys will have quite a rest, but they will be back in the line.

Major "Dadman" has been discovered and every nerve has been strung to get him back in the line.

This effort will continue during the day to come.

The game at Cambridge last Saturday held forth little hope, for while victorious over the Penn State team, there was not enough in the game to give the coaches that confidence which should be felt to a greater or lesser degree, just prior to a big game.

The season in football has progressed to the point where the discussion of players with the assistance of a backfield seems to be a recommendation that many are still found wanting.

Blacklock took a prominent part of the labor of the Princeton players, and in the last of Coach Houghton yesterday, and this with but today and tomorrow left in which to perfect the team.

Only the players who were in the game yesterday, his duration being about three-quarters of an hour. The coaches bawled themselves out in the game, trying to get the team into shape for the rest.

In the last of the game, King was out, and back again to the team.

Another significant point in this last day preparation was in the fact that the team was not in the line.

The game, a feature in football which is usually employed during the earlier period of the team's development.

The game was probably considered as a test, or it would have been in the line.

GREEN SCHWAB BACK IN HARVARD LINE

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

McCall Will Need the Support of All Progressive Men to Help Him Keep the Republican Party Faithful

THE voters of Massachusetts have elected Mr. McCall. He will take office by the grace of a minority, it is true, but under our practices he is duly elected and is entitled to the support of that majority of the citizens who voted against him.

It is quite clear that Mr. McCall, through the promise of a Constitutional Convention, attracted enough of the progressive voters in this State to secure his election. His success turned upon the Constitutional Convention plank. By his insistence upon it he indicated that he had greater vision and more statesmanlike perceptions than the old leaders who secretly chafed at the idea.

When Mr. McCall succeeded, against the opposition of the reactionary group which controlled his party, in making the Republican convention declare for a Constitutional Convention, composed of delegates without partisan designation, the AMERICAN declared in this editorial column that he had achieved a great deal in the interest of progress in Massachusetts.

The AMERICAN then said: "But Mr. Bird and Senator Burbank have secured a pledge from the Republicans that they will call a convention to which delegates shall be elected without party designation. This is the hopeful thing that has occurred in Massachusetts politics for a number of years. Such a convention will be able to formulate a series of alternative proposals to be submitted to the people. Those who believe in the Initiative and Referendum, and in other great reforms, will be able to submit to the people of Massachusetts these important progressive measures for their judgment. This has long been the object of the AMERICAN's labors, and it is with profound satisfaction that we observe that Mr. Bird and Senator Burbank and the Progressive influences behind them, acting upon the intelligence and flexibility of Mr. McCall, have succeeded in pleading the Republican party, which will undoubtedly control the next Legislature, to such a Constitutional Convention."

"Mr. McCall's record has been pronounced unimpeachable in the past, but he has no record of violating pledges, and now that he is specifically bound by his own desire to an honest Constitutional Convention, the AMERICAN does not doubt that he means to carry out his pledge in the utmost good faith."

Mr. McCall enters upon his office with no easy task to perform, if he intends, as we believe he does, to carry out his promise to hold a free, open Constitutional Convention. We want a convention with full power to canvass the sentiment of the voters on the great controverted questions which every year have agitated the Legislature during the last ten years, and which will not end until these questions are finally and directly passed upon by the voters themselves. Mr. McCall probably understands that the old-line leaders of his party, men who controlled his organization, the men who were the greatest burden which he had to carry in the campaign, will do all they can to make him break the word of promise to the hope while perhaps permitting him to keep it to the ear. But every good and intelligent instinct in the man will cry out for the nearest honor on this question.

A Constitutional Convention which will accomplish something satisfactory to the people of Massachusetts will ally the constant agitation for bringing the government of this State more in the direct control of the people with the epoch in the history of Massachusetts and a crowning event and act in Mr. McCall's public career. In this struggle, which we fear will be a real struggle, Mr. McCall is entitled to the support of every forward-looking citizen of Massachusetts, and it will be upon him, and the direction of the fight will be in his hands. We must resolve all reasonable doubts in his favor and support him with all the power which we can exercise, unless we become convinced that he, too, is faithless. This misfortune we have no doubt that Massachusetts will escape. This question does not involve Mr. McCall's point of view. It involves the honor of a gentleman, a character which everyone has always acknowledged in Mr. McCall.

He will have the support of the AMERICAN in everything which he tries to do in the interest of this Commonwealth, and the AMERICAN will resolve doubts in his favor.

Governor Walsh

THERE is far more honor for Governor Walsh in this defeat than in most of the ordinary partisan victories which the candidates for public office usually win.

The righteousness of the causes for which he has stood, the universal tributes paid to his character, the inability of his opponents to prove an important dereliction in his public record, the general acknowledgment of his honesty and gentlemanly qualities, and the enormous vote which he received, are honors which will last longer than most victories.

He was the vicarious victim of conditions over which he had no control. He was defeated by Progressives in the State who felt that Mr. McCall, as the leader of the party which controls the Legislature, would have more power to obtain a constitutional Convention than the leader of a hostile party.

We shall see whether the judgment of these Progressives is sound. If the Republicans do not keep faith these very men may ask the Governor to take down from the wall his untarnished sword and buckle and lead them in a fight for progress.

More Truth Than Poetry

Putting It Off

I KNOW a wicked little imp who's very, very fly. And when you're told to go to bed he whispers, "By and by." And when your lesson hour comes he smiles a crafty smile—Though you can't see the smile or imp—and murmurs, "Wait awhile!" And always when the time arrives for any task that's set, He creeps up softly by your side and gently says, "Not yet!"

AND when he says these things to you you're sure they're just about A. The very best suggestions that a person could think out. For bedtime always comes too soon and books are in the way—The books with lessons in them when a boy would rather play—And as for tasks—if they are left for someone else to do, As you have noticed lots of times—they never bother you.

BUT when you go out in the world you'll hear distressing tales Of big, strong men in shabby clothes locked up in horrid jails. And all of them, when just about as old and big as you, Did every solitary thing that imp advised them to do. So if you'd like to be in jail with shabby clothes to wear, Obey that imp in everything—it's quite your own affair.

How to Keep Wife's Love

By Rev. Mabel Irwin

I AM asked a most refreshing question: "How shall a husband keep his wife's love?" This question is so novel that it well-nigh took my breath away when I read it. I have seen a score of times "How shall I keep my husband's love?" but never "How shall I keep my wife's love?" Men appear to take it for granted that a woman's heart once won her love is eternal, and in the main the man is right. "Love never dies, but the bloom of love is easy to brush away. Biologists tell us that 'The female is the balance wheel of the whole machinery of nature.' Because of this steadfastness in love is her peculiar trait. The male is variant and unstable. As the mother of all created things the female is more conservative than the male, and her sex-fancy is less likely to stray. It thus happens that wives have more reason to fear, or doubt, the sex loyalty of their husbands than have the husbands their wives. But when true love is between them neither need fear its loss; it will go with them through life.

I will tell you, however, the words I whispered into the ear of a bridegroom, just after the ceremony which pronounced him the husband of a sweet, flower-faced girl, and over, and perhaps it will serve as a hint to you:

"If you want her to love you all the days of your life, never make her for a moment feel that you require of her 'marital duties.' He gave me a quick look of recognition, then said: 'I understand.'"

That was some two years ago. Just recently I looked into the content, radiant face of the wife, holding her beautiful baby boy to her breast, and I was satisfied that her love for her husband was more than the day when she was a bride; and all, perhaps, because of the words I whispered into his ear on that wedding day, and which he did 'understand.'

Self-Control the First Element in Character

Many Persons Think They Have It, but Nearly All Are Found Lacking in Some Way When They Are Put to Strict Test—Will Must Be Developed

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

I SAW an angel with majestic mien And radiant brow, and smile frankly sweet, Strong human passions writhed beneath his feet; There, too, expired those coward faults which screen Themselves behind inheritance, and lean On dead men for their strength and think it meet— All, all lay prostrate, swaying their defeat.

Then to the spirit with the eyes serene I cried aloud, in wonder and in awe: "O mighty one, who art thou that thy glance Can circumvent heredity—cheat chance, And conquer nature? What occult law? Art thou incarnate Force—the over-soul?" The angel answered: "I am Self-Control."

UCH is said of self-control by preachers and teachers the world over, but to how many human beings can we point as illustrating the beauty of that virtue? In truth, what is self-control?

Were your child to ask you what you meant by the word, could you explain? Are you exercising this admirable quality in your daily life, and if so, in what direction? Perhaps you have an insatiable taste for strong drink, and you control it, and "touch not, taste not, handle not the unclean thing."

That is well and good. Yet are you bringing on disease and early death by indulging a gross appetite for hearty foods? Possibly you are impatient by inclination and you compel yourself to work. That, too, is well and good.

The human drone who does no labor, mental or physical, for the good of the human life should be driven from among his kind. Yet he who would be worthy of the appellation of "a self-controlled man" must do more than to labor in idleness.

If you are possessed with an insatiable love of wealth your very labor may be a dissipation and call for the use of self-control. Next to the sin of idleness comes the sin of improvidence in work. To work day and night to the injury of your health and to the neglect of your family means the destruction of the temple of your soul and the foundation of happiness on earth—the home.

If you are mad for great wealth it will be an easy matter for you to make a necessity of a desire and to commit domestic and hygienic suicide by a lack of self-control. An hour or two a day, or an evening or two in the week, might be given to recreation and home will help you to realize how small an object it is in the general scheme of happiness. Wealthy people placed beside the things you are sacrificing to obtain it.

Perhaps you are a literary man, or a clergyman, or an artist engaged in creative work. Upon the success of your work depends the comfort of your family and your reputation as a man of talent. Therefore you feel justified in being somewhat "difficult" in your home and social relations.

You are nervous and irritable, and you have no excuse to make. Talent is expected to cover a multitude of such sins. Talent excuses nothing which weakens character, and the first element in character development is self-control. Control your boiling nervousness and your childish irritability if you want to rank among the worth-while souls of earth. Again, you may be a good busband, a good provider for your family, an honest, earnest business man, but your weakness lies where the fair sex is concerned. So long as you keep from scandal and so long as you blacken no woman's reputation, you feel you are excusable for an occasional lapse from what you term the "good-goodsy path of rectitude."

Yet there is nothing which so weakens the moral nature, nothing which so destroys the fibre of character, as a loose rein given the passionate nature. It is the most persistent, familiar and fascinating temptation encountered by men and women on this journey through earth. Because of the all-powerful, underlying creative impulse throughout the entire universe, this temptation lurks in every breast and on every highway as we pass along life's pilgrimage. Only the half-born or the half-dead are immune from it.

Do not think you are exceptionally tempted, and therefore excusable for yielding to your tendencies. Where there is passion there, too, is will. Exercise your self-control, and your will is sure to assert itself. If you are a beautiful or a fascinating woman, you are no doubt tempted to forget your dignity and lower your ideals for the love of power or the pleasure of conquest. If you break no commandment you feel you are doing all that could be demanded of one so peculiarly tempted.

But only as you develop your power of self-control and satisfy your highest ideal of womanhood are you doing what life demands of you. It may be you are a paragon of the virtues, but your weakness lies in the direction of extravagance. Money slips through your hands and you are not able to account for its disappearance. That means a weakness of character. Use your self-control and acquire a reasonable habit of economy.

Have you never learned how to wait? Impatience is not an attribute of Mother Nature. Behold with what quiet industry she goes along the year, waiting for seed to sprout, for sprout to blossom, for blossom to ripen into fruit. Behold the patience of the stars within their orbits.

Even so learn to control yourself and wait the coming of events. There is nothing the self-controlled human being may not accomplish. But the word must be understood in its fullest sense and applied in its broadest application.

He who would conquer heredity and overcome temptation, and create opportunity and build character, must know the whole definition of self-control, and, knowing it, live it!
